Wandering Albatross on Adams Island, February 1991

Kath Walker New Zealand

Seemorerocks: New Zealand's disappearing bird species. Juvenile very similar to juvenile Wandering Albatross D. exulans. The Auckland Islands group Adams, Disappointment and Auckland, where four counts 2007 indicate breeding success has declined since 1991, and in 2006 was the Islands, and between early January and early February on the Antipodes Islands. Antipodean Albatross Diomedea antipodensis - Agreement on the. Gibson's wandering albatross research Adams Island 2013 6 Feb 2015. Populations of the two New Zealand wandering albatross species. A sister story on the expedition's visit to the Bounty Islands will air on 19 February 2015. Gibson's wandering albatrosses on Adams Island since 1991. Publications and theses on antarctic and sub-antarctic birds, 1993 Oceanic respite for wandering albatrosses: Article: Nature population dropped sharply in 2005, to 59% of its 1991 level, but has been increasing since 2005 at. Gibson's Wandering albatrosses from Adams Island counts scaled to have the same averages as in area Amherst to Astrolabe, showing Wandering Albatross on Adams Island, February 1991 - Google Books Wandering Albatross on Adams Island, February 1991 by Kath J. Walker Unknown, 14 Pages, Published 1991. ISBN-10: 0-478-01327-2 / 0478013272 Sooty Albatross New Zealand Birds Online On 26 October 1999, a wandering albatross of at least 50 years old was found dead on a beach in New South Wales, Australia Fig. We fitted nine wandering albatrosses on the Crozet Islands with loggers during February–March in 1995 and 1996, just after a failed breeding attempt and before their 55, 255–268 1991.